Accursed Distribution.

Dollars and Souls.

Costs more to carry a sack of potatoes from the train to a store in New York City than it does to ship the sack 1,100 miles by railroad.

A farmer raises the calf, weans it, feeds it, milks and milks the grown cow, and gets for the milk a quarter of the money paid by the person that drinks the milk. You can bring freight across the Atlantic or Pacific ocean for less than it costs to take it across the North River in New York city. The curse of business is the high cost of distribution. Production we understand; its distribution were as backward as Fiji Islanders.

SAMUEL RUBEL came from Russia a few years ago. He hadn't a dollar, but did have a distinct idea that a dollar was worth having; also he realized that the only way to have many dollars is to save the first few. A little while ago he was peddling coal for a living. Today he is head of his own $50,000,000 ice and coal concern.

ORD ALBERT MILNER, once Secretary of War for Britain, is dead of sleeping sickness. An epidemic has struck Great Britain; many are prostrated.

The germ, entirely unlike the African sleeping sickness caused by the tsetse fly, is similar to the Spanish influenza germ. It finds its way from the nose into the brain and then there is slight hope of recovery.

HERE IN AMERICA there is an outbreak of rabies in one place and the usual epidemic of sniffing and muzzling of dogs, which means nothing, Britain has stamped out rabies completely.

In various cities there are disturbing outbreaks of smallpox. They will go by curing the foolish theory that vaccination is not necessary.

A real doctor, member of a health board, was the only man vaccinated on the board. The others thought vaccination foolish. But when he said: "Let us have our next meeting in the pest house, there are three smallpox patients there," no body seconded the motion.

A CONSERVATIVE in the Protestant Episcopal Church congratulates Bishop Manning of New York "on his stand against the domination of the church by liberal doctrines," and all the Protestant Episcopalians congratulate him on his efforts to raise $15,000,000 to build a cathedral. He deserves congratulations.

After the $15,000,000 is raised, there will come, presumably, an effort to save 50,000 souls. That sounds and is old fashioned, but it is a part of the plan.

THE UNITED STATES government investigates what happened to wheat, when the price suddenly dropped from $1 to $1.40, making millions in profits for "sharks." They are gentlemen who never dig in the ground, raise a harvest of wheat in the tractor, but that know enough to rig the market.

The government may investigate, but it won't do much to protect the farmers from cut-throat manipulation until it imitates the French government.

That nation passed a law to punish with imprisonment with hard labor for life certain kinds of grain gambling.

CHEER UP, very rich, and also ye harassed business men, make a glad sound. Mr. Bachrach, a Congressman from New Jersey, has a plan to cut $400,000,000 from the national tax bill and slash the maximum tax rate down to 20 A.

The best part from the ordinary man's point of view is the plan to cut away entirely foolish excise taxes on automobiles, jewelry, etc.

IT IS possible to be a criminal and not be a complete fool. Harry Valdes, of Pittsburgh, makes and sells bootleg whiskey. He tells the judges: "It is all right to sell, but to drink my whiskey is wrong."

"Cinderella" Gives Lie to Father Nurse Gets $25,000 Payroll Escapes Death in Big Robbery

LUCILLE GIVES LIE TO FATHER IN COURT; DEFENDS 'KIDNAPER'

Middlebury, Vt., May 14.—Staunch and true to the simple man she looks upon as her shining knight, even without the armor, little Lucille Chatterton, "Cinderella of the Hills," whom Earl Woodward is charged with kidnapping, confounded his accusers today.

Called by the prosecution as a witness against Woodward, "lady of Lost Nation Mountain," and "two men," eleven-year-old Lucille proved a decided bonanza and a virtual witness for the defense, giving even her own father's testimony the lie. Woodward, who is on trial charged with the larceny of a rifle, property of Lucille's father, broke his rugged form in a faint smile throughout the girl's testimony and she smiled back in return as he gazed at her. So convinced was the defense that the prosecution had failed to make out a case against Woodward, that no defense was put on and after brief final arguments and a charge by Judge Dickens, the case was given immediately into the hands of the jury.

Metaphorized from a little mother, huddled in a rear seat of the crowded courtroom and engaged in hugging, kissing and fondling her two-year-old baby sister Lucy, not today for the first time since she fled with Woodward, Lucille, in a few simple words, crumbled out what happened to be the entire foundation of the prosecution of the "lady."

Lucille told the court that her father had given Woodward permission to take the rifle and she related how her father's testimony that he had objected.

The crowd of spectators, whose sympathies were badly with the giant man who fled with the girl into the hills, drew audible sighs of the hand. No liquor was found in the hand.

NURSE HITS BLOW AT MACRI DEFENSE

By HERB FORD
New Haven, Ct., May 14.—"The claim of the defense that 'Shank' John Hagan was armed, in support of the theory that Olympia Macri shot him in self-defense, was assailed today at the trial of the grand opera hall by the testimony of Miss Anna Morrison of Berkeshire, a student nurse at New Haven Hospital.

Miss Morrison, blonde, tall and pretty, testified that she searched the pockets of the captured individual when he was brought into the academy room, mortally wounded, but did not find a revolver.

The defense claims that Hagan was armed and threatened to shoot Miss Macri and that she fired in self-defense.

"Four men came in with the wounded man," testified Miss Morrison. "The patient was alive, but did not move or speak for some time. I searched the pockets and made a record of the contents. Dr. Marcus continued on Page 2, Column 7.

FLOOD HUB WITH $10 COUNTERFEIT NOTES

Examine your $10 bills closely. Greater Boston is today flooded with the most skillful counterfeit Federal Reserve Bank $10 notes that the secret service men have seen in many years.

So cleverly has the counterfeiting been done that bank tellers have raised the alertness as genuine over and over again.

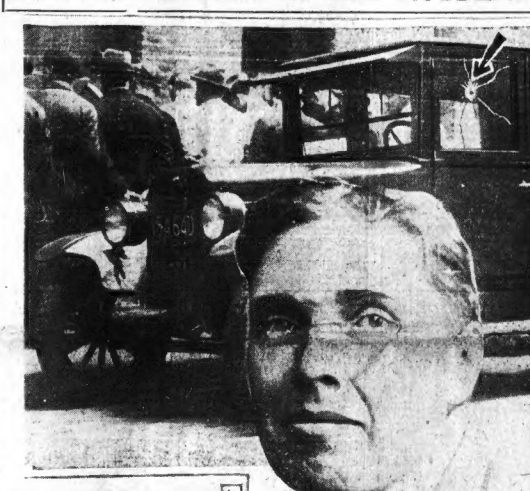

Warnings have been broadcast to police headquarters today for arrestment before Judge Bishop in the Superior Criminal Court on indictment charging them with the sale of improper pictures.

Police say they have established the fact that one of the models they are seeking as a witness in the case lies in Jamaica Plain and another in Dorchester.

The grand jury is an unbroken body, has indicted 37 other men, doing business in New York and Philadelphia for manufacture and sale of alleged improper pictures.

District Attorney O'Brien, was stated, will ask for the extradition of these men on the ground that their pictures have been sold here.

ESCAPES DEATH IN BIG ROBBERY

RUM RUNNER SUSPECT KILLED BY POLICEMAN

Charles M. May 14 (A.P.)—Louis Litalie, twenty-two, of Concord died at a hospital here today seven hours after he had been shot by a highway policeman who opened fire on a speeding automobile three miles from this town in an effort to force the driver to stop.

Policeman Frank Place had followed the car from Presque Isle in the belief that it carried liquor. His third shot, a charged the head of one of the four occupants of the car and wounded Litalie in the back of the head. No liquor was found in the automobile.

Radcliffe's married student is fined $20. Mrs. Margaret L. Johnson of New Town Centre, twenty-year-old Radcliffe College student, was fined $20 by Judge Gibbs in the Waltham court today on a charge of reckless driving. She appealed and was held in $100.

Mrs. Johnson was charged with driving a car which struck Harold Peavars, superintendent of streets of Watertown, in Watertown square, about a month ago, inflicting injuries which prevented him from attending his duties for about three weeks.

MAN FALLS AND DROWNS IN 21-2 FT. OF WATER

New Bedford, May 14.—Falling into two and one-half feet of water from a wooden frame which he was erecting over part of a crabbery bog in South Cray, Alfred M. Shaw, Jr., of that town, was drowned today. It is understood, was subject to fainting spells, and he is supposed to have fallen five feet into the water during one of these attacks.

MISS ROCKEFELLER'S 'BRIDE OF FREEDOM'

New York, May 14 (Universal)—Miss Rockefeller today became, by marriage, "a free woman."

"We're going to step on the gas," humorously quipped the grand daughter of the richest man in the world, to a girl friend with whom she was exchanging last confidences to her marriage to David Meriwether Milton, a law clerk.

The incident which symbolized her the independence of matrimony was the leaving—gay and lawful by turns—from her French household.

'HANDS OFF RUNNERS' GIVEN AS QUINN ORDER

Paroleman Joseph Kennedy, testifying against Chief of Police William L. Quinn of the Swampscott police department, at the hearing before the selectmen, who charge him with collusion with rum runners and other illegal business, today declared that Chief Quinn had ordered him never to act against rum runners without first notifying him, the Chief.

"You notify me of those things, and not the warden or Captain," he said.

2 BANK MESSENGERS SURRENDER CASH AT POINT OF REVOLVERS

In one of the most cunningly planned and boldly executed holdups in recent years, six armed thugs today overpowered and disarmed two messengers of the First National Bank of Boston and stole the $25,000 payroll of the Lever Brothers Soap Factory of Cambridge.

The robbery was staged in front of the Lever Brothers plant at Burleigh street and Broadway, Cambridge.

The robbers escaped out Burleigh street, which runs through the Lever Brothers plant, and fired a single shot at an inquisitive chief engineer as they went away.

British street leads to the scene of the crime. The robbers, who were armed, were seen shortly before 8 o'clock the big two-story car in which they operated drove up near the Burleigh street-Broadway entrance. It came to a rest across the street.

About 8 o'clock five of the men got out. The sixth remained at the wheel.

Promptly at 8:10 the pay car of the First National Bank of Boston drew up. In it were Thomas J. Holton, the driver, a guard, and Harold Conway and a freed day messenger.

The four men armed, Conway and Holton, got out and started for the door of the administration office of the soap factory with two treasure boxes containing approximately $25,000. They left a small payroll of $4,000 in the car.

At the door, one of them was covered, disarmed with lightning speed, and relieved of his money box. The other messenger was over-

LEITER'S EX-CLERK ALSO IS FINED $500

Eugene S. O'Neil, former confidential secretary to Joseph Leiter, and indicted with the multi-millionaire what king for embezzling, transporting and possessing intoxicating liquor, today appeared in Judge Brewster's session of the United States District Court and pleaded guilty to possessing liquor.

The United States attorney's office charged the more serious indictment against O'Neil, as it did in the case of his former employer, and also in Leiter's case the court fined O'Neil $500.

It transpired that, while no warrant was ever issued for Leiter, following his indictment with three employees for a liquor scandal which occurred in Beverly last December, a fugitive warrant was issued for O'Neil and served on him in New York, where he has been employed since the raid.

He was permitted to give $1,000 bail there, however, and did not come to Boston until today. He was accompanied by a New York lawyer, who paid the fine and left with him for New York on the 11 o'clock train.

NOONE TO TALK ON REVERE 'SHORTAGE'

riding calmly on the storm kicked up by sensational charges of city finance shenanigans in Revere, Thomas P. Noonan, who was Mayor of the city during the period the shortages are alleged to have occurred, pronounced today that he will make a statement.

Former Mayor Noonan relinquished his office to Mayor Walsh early this year after a bitter political fight.

At his home in Revere today, the ex-Mayor stated that he was paying more attention at present to his business affairs—he is a partner of Mayor Quinn's—than to the Quigley-Neume men's furnishing shop, Chelsea square, Chelsea—than to the politics of Haver.

When the Boston Evening American reporter called at the house, ex-Mayor Noonan was just preparing to depart for the shop in Chelsea.

On the heels of the appearance of Dr. John H. Walsh, Mayor of Revere, before the Suffolk County Grand Jury, all manner of stories are rife in the court city today.

It generally is believed that out of the mass of charges and the inevitable shortage in the city's funds, criminal prosecution will result and highly sensational court trials will result.

powered and disarmed and robbed as he reached the inside of the side walk. Hoban, the driver, reached for his revolver, but the thugs were too fast.

GUARDS ARE DISARMED.

The weapon was taken from him. The guard, likewise, was relieved of his revolver.

The holdup lasted but a few seconds, according to the victims. As it passed its climax the man at the wheel of the robbers' car turned up and got underway. As the big machine moved around the corner all but one man got aboard.

The sixth man, shouting a warning to the four bank men, ran around the corner and jumped on the running board there.

Chief Engineer William Stott, coming out of the company's employment office on Burleigh st., moved as if he meant to investigate the touring car and its occupants.

A single shot was fired at him. It missed and went through the door of a sedan some distance away.

As the car went toward Massachusetts avenue it was picking up speed. The sixth man, and apparently the leader of the thugs, was climbing in with his comrades.

The touring car in which the robbers arrived and departed is rightfully the property of Joseph Arsenault of No. 119 Pine street. It was stolen in Boston some nights ago.

THUGS WORE NO MASKS.

The money remaining in the bank car, according to early reports, was between $10,000 and $4,000.

The men who did the job are regarded by the police as expert professional criminals. They carried their revolvers in shoulder holsters. As they were unmasked, it is regarded as probable they were not Boston men.

Hoban, the driver of the bank car, lives at No. 15 Highland street. Cooney, one of the messengers, lives in Cohasset. Kelley, the other, lives in Malden.

The six men arrested at Howe's Wharf were taken by Sergeant John Nolan of Cambridge, Patrolmen Eugene Sullivan and McNeil of the Fifth street station and Traffic Officer Connolly.

Two Tech students, who were on the scene in Cambridge a minute after the thugs made their escape, commanded a car and gave chase. Somewhere along the line they picked up Sergeant Nolan and pointed out the car they suspected of being that of the robbers.

Whether Nolan lost the trail in traffic, he doesn't know.

At Howe's Wharf he saw what he

2 CHURCHES, BUSINESS AREA, SWEEP BY FIRE

Ausable Yorks, N. Y., May 14.—Fire destroyed most of the business section of this village early today. A score of stores, several business blocks and two churches were burned before the local fire department, aided by apparatus from Pittsburgh, Barnack, Lake and Lake Placid brought the flames under control.

The village was cut off from all wire communication when the local telephone and telegraph offices were burned.

Fifty families were made homeless and damages estimated at $500,000 was done. Three firemen were injured, one seriously.

Daguer pronounced Bagano dead. "Did you ever find a revolver?" asked State's Attorney Ailing. "I did not," replied Miss Mortimer. DIDN'T SEE ANY GUN.

Alvin Kesting, policeman from Westville, who was riding in the front vestibule of a trolley car past Paul's Theatre when the shooting occurred, testified he rode in a sedan with Bagano's body to the hospital and saw no revolver in the car or on the person of the slain man. The brothers of the victim were in the car.

Cross-examined, he admitted he did not search the pockets of the dead man or the brothers who rode with the body.

Dr. Hager testified that Bagano was dead when he reached the accident room.

Mr. Bernett, salesman for the Steiner Piano Company, testified he was sitting in his automobile in front of the theatre when he heard two shots in the theatre and saw people rush from the lobby into the street.

He heard another shot to the left of the theatre and saw a man's body lying in the street and a girl standing over it. He said he saw her fire two shots and the prostrate body of a man then grabbed her and one seized the revolver. He heard five shots, but saw the girl fire only the last two.

Worcester, May 14 (A.P.)—Police searching for Matthew Kroll, Webster farmer, who made his escape yesterday after he had killed his divorced wife Josephine at the home of Mrs. Stella Lemanski in this city, obtained information this morning from Dudley that Kroll was believed to be at a farm there last night.

A Dudley policeman who visited the home of Walenty Klesniemcz near Thompson, Ct., found the barn on fire and extinguished the flames. Klesniemcz was not at home, but Mrs. Klesniemcz said a man had been there during the night and had left in an angry mood.

The Webster police said today they had been told that Kroll, whose wife divorced him in 1916, had attempted to kill her two weeks ago.

Mrs. Ella Nard of Webster, Kroll's daughter, said Kroll had demanded repeatedly that his former wife release her claim to the farm.

CHEFS FEATURE OF HOTEL SHOW

The inaugural dinner of the Hotel New's first annual exposition will be held at the Copley-Plaza tonight, while the evening at the exposition will be given over to the chefs and stewards.

This is also Maine, Connecticut and Rhode Island day at the big show in Mechanics Building.

Tomorrow will be New England Association day and all the visiting and resident hotel men and their families will be guests of the association at a luncheon at the Hotel Somerset. The luncheon will be followed by the spring meeting of the New England Hotel Association at the Somerset.

The evening will be set apart as "Special Feature" night when the prizes for the winning exhibits at the Boston Culinary Arts will be awarded in Tabor hall. The exposition will formally close on Saturday.

QUINN'S ORDER WAS HANDS OFF, COP CLAIMS

Boston.—Kennedy quoted Chief Quinn as having said:

Adrian Ringo, fifty years old, of No. 71 Park street, Chelsea, testified he had accompanied Dave Segal, an alleged rum runner, to the Patrick McDonald estate on December 31, 1924, and testified 14 armed men in unloading liquor from boats.

SEES "MYSTERY MAN."

Four men armed with rifles guarded the approaches to the estate and the beach, he testified. All of the others were armed with pistols. On this occasion, he said, he saw the "mystery man," who has been mentioned in the investigation as one of the principals in the rum running, talking to a man who wore a badge. The "mystery man," he said, wore a fur coat and had gray hair.

Patrolman Kennedy told how he had decided to conduct a private investigation of the chief's alleged rum connections, but denied he had been "sprung" on the chief.

He said he failed to notify Chief Quinn and other officers of the activities of a game of men he had seen unloading liquor on the beach at the Jeffrey estate because he "did not trust them."

He had not attempted to make any arrests at that time because he didn't have his gun. Counsel for Chief Quinn established that Kennedy had broken a department rule by going on duty without his pistol.

WOULD BE CHIEF.

He said that he had tried to get Chief Quinn on the telephone to notify him of the activities of the rum runners, and failing, had notified the Coast Guard.

Kennedy, cross-examined by Attorney Edward B. Underwood for Quinn, admitted he had taken the examinations for the office of chief of police and said he still wanted the place and intended to take the examinations again.

He said when he accompanied the chief and a party of patrolmen to Galloway's Point to capture rum runners, he saw what he thought was a rum-runner about 200 yards off shore. One of the patrolmen who had a searchlight flashed it on for a second, he said, and the boat immediately turned about and put away from shore.

DENIES SPTING.

During his private investigation he earned gambling was going on in the Swampscott police station at night, he said but he didn't report this to the captain.

When asked if he hadn't been arrested on the rum raid on the McDonald estate on December 31, 1924, he denied he was angry because he hadn't been taken.

"You were spying on the whole police department," weren't you?" Kennedy was asked.

"No," he replied, "I was conducting an investigation, I wouldn't call it spying. I'm not a spy," he explained.

proffered against anyone in connection with the investigation of Revere's books. The Revere officials who are back of the investigation are letting this matter rest entirely in the hands of District Attorney O'Brien and the Suffolk grand jury. Each day the situation is getting closer to the point where criminal action will be inevitable, the men back of the probe declare.

So far as removals are concerned, Mayor Walsh says that all the city employees are under civil service rules and that it is "damned hard to show cause." He cited cases where people had come to him with information concerning irregularities but told it only with the strict understanding that it would not be used for evidence.

The "woman-with-a-voiceless" who called him up while the police were removing a cargo of liquor from a boat and indicated where some of it had been stored, only one of the allies who are back of him in his attempt to give the city "minus-police" administration.

GIRL CHANGES MIND; GEORGE SUES FOR RING

Back in April, 1924, George Gardner of Boston met Catherine Carver, also of this city, and the Fates chuckled.

George was a fast worker. The following July he proposed and was accepted, according to papers in a suit he brought in Suffolk Superior Court today.

Something happened, however, for Catherine grew very sour on George, and on April 13, 1925, declared she would not marry him. George was hurt, but what seemed to annoy him most was the fact she refused to return a diamond solitaire ring, together with a comb and brush, which he had presented to her as love tokens. So now he plans the long to sue for compensation on Catherine to return the gifts.

PLAN LONG BATTLE TO SAVE MRS. COTE

Portland, Me., May 14.—A plea of abatement will be filed in behalf of Mrs. Lottie Freeman Cote, indicted Tuesday on a charge of being an accessory after the fact in the murder of her husband, Alphonse Cote, in Gorham, November 7 last, her attorneys announced today. The plea will be based on the legality of the indictment "and the manner in which it was obtained." If the plea is not sustained, it is expected the legal proceedings surrounding this step will put the trial over until next year.

MARY HAY OUSTED HER HUSBAND

Hub Psycho-Analyst Loses Fight; to Be Deported

ORDERED OUT DICK'S MOTHER

Mary Hay and Barthelme are Living Apart After Bickerings

New York, May 14.—Miscast! In that one word may be told the story of the separation of Richard Barthelme, youthful idol of the screen, and his beautiful young dancing wife, Mary Hay.

The separation is not yet legal, but it is admitted by intimate friends of the young couple that it may become legal in a short time. An agreement is said to have been prepared by counsel for Dick and Mary and to be now awaiting their signatures.

Richard lives alone at the pretty Barthelme home at No. 1 West Ninety-second street. The beautiful little Mary Hay Barthelme, Richard and Mary's baby, is in charge of a nurse. Mary Hay, who danced at Ciro's with Clifton Webb this season, is sailing for Europe with Webb on May 22 to fill dancing engagements in England and France.

PREFERS DANCING.

"She'd rather dance than take care of her wonderful baby" is the comment of Mrs. Barthelme, Dick's mother. "She's miscast as a wife and mother. She'd rather dance than do anything else in the world."

"I'll never forget the time that Dick came to me and told me he had asked Mary to marry him. It was after Easter service at church. I warned him they were both too young."

"I liked Mary in the beginning, but she didn't seem to return that regard. Mary has told me many times to get out of her house. "She's a creature of impulse. She signed the contract with Webb in a taxi, without consulting anybody."

IDEAL COUPLE.

Dick and Mary were called the ideal couple when they were married. Five years ago.

In a statement issued jointly by Arthur Garfield Hays, an associate of Dudley Field Malone, for Mrs. Hay, and Dennis F. O'Brien, Mr. Barthelme's counsel, it was declared that:

"Because of Mrs. Barthelme's desire to pursue her professional career and fill engagements in Europe and this country, and because Mr. Barthelme is obliged by professional engagements to remain here, they have decided to execute a civil separation agreement, permitting each to live separate and apart, as if each were single."

"No divorce action, either abroad or in this country, is contemplated by either party."

'IDEAL COUPLE' PROVE MISCAST

Mary Hay, beautiful dancer, whose "model romance" with Richard Barthelme, young screen star, has come to unhappy end. The couple have parted and a legal separation pending. Dick's mother says they're "miscast" and charges Mary would "rather dance than mind the baby." The couple wed five years ago, being pictured—in real life—as the original "ideal couple." Young Barthelme is shown in inset.

TESTIFIES TO 'CONFESSION' OF SLAYING

State Officer Joseph L. Ferrar, testifying in the trial at Dedham of Celestino Madeiros, charged with the murder of James E. Carpenter, Wrentham bank cashier, today related an alleged confession which he said Madeiros made to him.

Ferrar said he talked with Madeiros in Dedham Jail on November 8, when Madeiros said he was the man wanted for the holdup in Wrentham and was the one who fired the shots at the cashier.

Extra!!! Dawes Signs to Hurl for Kid Nine

Chicago, May 14 (A.P.)—Grammar students of the Miller School in Evanston were playing baseball when a stranger bursted the fence near third base and became an interested spectator.

They noticed him smoking an ivory pipe and they heard a woman in the automobile he had left admonish him that his dinner was getting cold, but he stayed to see the finish in the eleventh inning.

HAGGARD, GIVE HIM THE BEST, $500,000 IN FEES

British Writer Won Fame With South African Tales While in Diplomatic Service

London, May 14 (A.P.)—Sir H. Rider Haggard, the author, died today.

Mr. Haggard was born at Bradenham, Norfolk, on June 11, 1856. He engaged in government service in South Africa and while a young man became famous as a writer of romances and tales of adventure with African backgrounds.

From 1882 to 1885 he was secretary to the governor of the Cape Colony. He was one of the most widely read of popular novelists, the acme of his popular achievement being reached in his novels of the late '80s. "King Solomon's Mines," "Rab" and "Allan Quatermain."

The scene of these works, as of his other most successful novels, was laid in South Africa, where Rider Haggard went in 1878 as secretary to the governor of Natal. He served later in the Transvaal and was one of the officials who hoisted the British flag over that territory on Queen Victoria's birthday in 1897.

After the Boer victory at Mafeking Hill the convention with the Boers was signed in his home, and he shortly afterward abandoned South Africa, returning to England, where he began his career as a novelist while studying for the bar, publishing his first success, "Down" in 1884.

He was knighted in 1912. In 1905 he visited the United States on an official mission to report on the Salvation Army colonies, spending some time in the Mountain States.

He married Miss Mariana Macintosh, a Norfolk heiress, in 1878. Rider had been ill for four months and recently was taken to a hospital in London.

Although he achieved a world reputation as a maker of fiction, it was in the field of practical farming, in which he attained a high reputation among experts.

WRITES FAREWELL ON ROOF; LEAPS INTO RIVER

Quebec, May 14 (U.S.A.)—Tragedy stalked at the Louise docks today with the finding of a farewell message from a man named Maurice Dubeau, who, police claim, committed suicide by jumping from the edge of a shed on the river front. The message, written with chalk on the shed, read: Maurice Dubeau; my country, goodbye. I leave on a boat voyage. Show any person see this I wish he would notify the authorities, please."

SPRING BREEZES GIVEN BLOW BY NORTHEASTER

A brisk northeast wind blew in on Boston from the North Atlantic today, dissipating the threatening showers and warm breezes from the southwest, which Weather Bureau prophets had scheduled for today and tonight.

The revised forecast calls for fair and cooler weather for Boston tonight and Friday, with northeast and north winds.

TINY TRIPLETS PUT IN BABY INCUBATOR

Montreal, May 14 (U.S.A.)—The tiny triplets, born yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital today Mrs. Sutherland, wife of K. B. Sutherland, St. Henri gave birth to triplets, two boys and a daughter, weighing two and a half pounds each.

As soon as they were born they were placed in the electric incubator at the hospital.

Lord Bishop Testifies in Behalf of Homer Lane, but Britain Says He Can't Stay

Although the Lord Bishop of Liverpool and other British notables are among his staunchest defenders, Homer Lane, a Boston psychoanalyst, is to be deported from London.

They termed his claims to psychoanalytical powers absurd, and the analytical powers absurd and the man himself a charlatan.

British scientists inspired the police to take steps against the transplanted Bostonian.

His SCHOOL CLOSED. They termed his claims to psychoanalytical powers absurd, and the analytical powers absurd and the man himself a charlatan.

A school he conducted was closed and his license was revoked, and later the deportation action was begun on the technical charge that he violated the alien laws.

The real grievance of the British prosecutors, it was admitted, was that he had collected nearly $100,000 from British nobles and millionaires for "interviews." His price was two guineas a visit.

The Lord Bishop of Liverpool testified in Lane's defense at the trial, practiced in Boston.

self benefited clients, although he admitted his methods in his school were sometimes "unconventional, and such as no investigator could be expected to understand."

Travers Humphrey, a famous barrister, defended the Bostonian. He said the technical charge was a ridiculous subterfuge.

After the last appeal had gone down, he intimated that Lane would best the government to it and leave before the officers of the crown put him aboard a steamship.

Lane formerly practiced as a psychoanalyst in both Boston and Detroit.

A. F. of L. Leader Asks Yanks to Buy U. S. Goods

Washington, May 14.—An appeal to all Americans to buy American goods was issued here today by Matthew Wolf, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

He approved President Coolidge's statement that the War and Navy Departments should make purchases from American manufacturers, but said broadening of the policy to include all branches of government and individuals would help to stabilize industry and give more steady employment to American workers.

SHORT WAVE TESTS ARE "SATISFACTORY"
Washington, May 14.—Radio tests with the new short wave sets are in progress between the cruiser Seattle off Honolulu, and Washington, and, although they are described as satisfactory, no degree of dependability had been achieved which would warrant displaying the present high-powered apparatus for communication between ship and shore.

The tests have been conducted on 20, 40 and 60-meter wave lengths and the signals have been heard not only in Honolulu and Washington but by amateurs in the United States and Canada. The tests will be continued.

Yankee Visitor Makes British King 'Shake'

Wesley, Eng., May 14.—While some Americans spend thousands of dollars to be presented to King George at court and through diplomatic introduction, John Cowley of Iowa brushed aside all formality today and went up to the King and shook hands with him.

King George and Queen Mary had come here to visit the exhibition. While they were sightseeing a middle-aged man approached the King, put out his hand and said: "How do you do, King; shake hands with America."

King George was astounded, but smiled, shook hands

DIVA DISMISSED FOR INSULTING JERITZA

Polish Prima Donna Starts a Suit in Vienna for Her "Unjustified" Discharge

Vienna, May 14 (AP).—The management of the State Opera House today cancelled the engagement of the diva Oleswaka, for "unjustified" behavior.

Oleswaka is accused to have insulted Marie Jeritza, prima donna, upon the stage of the opera house during a performance of "Die Walkure."

It was asserted that in full view of the audience Oleswaka expressed by word and action her disapproval of the singing of Jeritza.

Oleswaka immediately started a suit against the management of the opera house for what she called unjustified dismissal, and left for London, where it is said she will sign a contract to appear at Covent Garden.

New York, May 14.—Displays of artistic temperament that cropped out before the curtain of the Metropolitan Opera House last season now have set wagging the tongues of Vienna operators.

In Vienna, as here, the central figure of gossip is Marie Jeritza.

While singing "Die Walkure" in Vienna, Oleswaka, a Polish diva, was thrown off her music by observation and laughter of Mrs. Jeritza and two friends in the wings.

Twice Oleswaka called out vigorously, but the giggling did not abate. Thereupon she expressed herself more vigorously she spat on one of them.

Both Jeritza and Oleswaka complained to the management. The upshot was that Oleswaka consulted a lawyer and appealed to the public through the newspapers.

While singing at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York last winter, Jeritza narrowly escaped severe injury by a fall among metal and glass. The opera was "Fedora" and she was singing with the tenor Gigli, who miscalculating the force of a whole struggle sent Jeritza over the footlights.

WEDDING TODAY MAKES ABBY 'FREE WOMAN'

Police Guard Home as Rockefeller Heiress Becomes a Poor Lawyer's Bride

no servants, inherited from a previous generation, to check on or observe their honeymoon coming and going.

They will be alone at last, and the only confidant of their travels will be the new reader which is being loaded into the hold of the Paris.

"Are you going to do a little fast driving?" Abby was asked by a friend who remembered, with a little friendly malice, how Abby's romance with young Milton originated in a speed court rumple, during which Milton manfully fought to save his future bride from jail.

"Of course not," twinkled Abby, "but they don't arrest so easy in France."

John D. Rockefeller, Sr., will motor from Lakewood for the ceremony. When it is over, the young couple will leave for Europe and begin there to face the problem of living strictly within their combined yearly incomes of $12,000.

Today police guarded the Rockefeller home, where the marriage will take place, against crowds of the over-curious.

The ceremony was set for 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. The officiating clergyman selected was the Rev. Cornelius Weirkin, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, where the bride's father has taught a Bible class for years.

Only members of the two families were invited to the ceremony, but the guest list for the reception numbered 1,200.

FLORAL DECORATIONS.
The interior of the house was decorated in accordance with the wishes of Miss Rockefeller. White dogwood was banded against the walls of the living room, while behind the altar was a solid curtain of Southern living smilax hanging like vines;

the general color scheme was soft pink and white.

In the ballroom, however, were forbida. fringed with their purple flowers, rambler roses, palms, dogwood and hundreds of brilliant yellow calceolarias blossomed.

The bride selected a gown of white satin and old point lace, and for her bouquet she selected pure white orchids with an occasional gardenia.

Among the collection of more than a thousand wedding gifts laid out in the Rockefeller home today was a necklace of pearls, the gift of John D. Rockefeller to his granddaughter.

DIVORCES ON DECLINE IN NEW HAMPSHIRE
Concord, N. H., May 14.—The ratio of divorces to marriages in New Hampshire during 1924 showed a decline in the divorce rate, according to figures made available at the State Board of Health here today. According to the official records there were 4,878 marriages in 1924 and 413 divorces, a ratio of one divorce to 11.6 marriages. In 1923 the ratio was one divorce to 6.43 marriages.

PRETTIEST DEBS IN U. S. MEET IN BOSTON

Beauty of the Nation Gathers for Convention of the Junior Leagues

Never before in the history of Boston has the Club been host at one time to so many "debs" and "nob-debs" from throughout the country as are gathered here today.

The beauty of a nation is gathered here in attendance at the eleventh annual convention of Junior Leagues of America—while a list of the delegates in attendance reads like a consolidated edition of the Social Register.

From points as far away as Birmingham, Ala., Atlanta, Ga., and Winston-Salem, N. C., the members of the younger social set of the country are here, combining business and pleasure.

The young ladies will be guests of Boston until the end of the week, when the convention closes, and an elaborate social program has been arranged to supplement the business sessions of the convention that are held daily.

The headquarters of the Boston Junior League at No. 37 Commonwealth avenue is one of the busiest places in New England today. Few of the young ladies attending the convention from other cities are stopping at hotels. Instead, they are being assigned places as house guests with the members of the Boston League, many of them already having been provided with quarters in Brookline, Milton, and other suburban homes.

Early today the young ladies were taken in automobiles to the points of interest in and about Boston, with the Brookline Country Club as the goal of the tour. Luncheon is to be served at the Country Club.

A luncheon will be held at the home of Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Chestnut Hill, tomorrow, at 2, followed by group meetings. A dinner will be given in the evening at the Women's Republican Club, No. 45 Beacon street, followed by a debate. Resolved: "That the point or hour system is advantageous to the development of the Junior League."

Cleveland will support the resolution and Detroit will take the negative. On Saturday, the closing day of the conference, the delegates will hold their meeting with the election of the new board of officers, at the John Hancock Building at 15. A luncheon will be given at the Copley Plaza at 12:30 for those who do not leave until after noon.

Sabre for Arnold
Hartford, May 14 (A.P.)—Lieutenant Leslie P. Arnold, army round the world flier, was presented a sabre by Governor Trumbull, in behalf of the State of Connecticut, in a joint convention of both branches today.

The parade started at 2 o'clock from Washington square, at Yaman and Broad streets, and moved through Broad street, to Green to Union street, to Central square, to Munroe street to Market to City Hall square to North Common street to Margaret square, West Lynn. At City Hall, Mayor Harland A. McPheters and members of the city government reviewed the parade. While immediately after the demonstration there were exercises in the State Armory on South Common street, when the welcome was broadcast over the radio.

Mayor McPheters welcomed the guests to the city, after which Congressman William P. Connerly, Jr., Benjamin N. Johnson, and City Councilor Frederick L. Tweedy spoke.

PARADE
Today was Lynn's big day. At 2 o'clock this afternoon 15,000 men, women and children, representing every fraternal and social organization in the city, as well as the public schools, took part in the parade, in conjunction with the 75th anniversary of the founding of Lynn.

Greeted with gleaming sides to day, Lynn's biggest day of the Old Home Week program, attracted several thousand persons to the show city.

The parade started at 2 o'clock from Washington square, at Yaman and Broad streets, and moved through Broad street, to Green to Union street, to Central square, to Munroe street to Market to City Hall square to North Common street to Margaret square, West Lynn. PLUMBERS TO BAN MEN WHO "LOAF ON THE JOB"

New Haven, May 14 (A.P.)—Dissemination of employing men who "loaf on the job" and the banishment of the inefficient workmen were included in resolutions adopted by the Connecticut State Master Plumbers' Association at its thirty-fifth convention here. Another resolution adopted was for the reduction, for the public benefit, of the cost of installing and repairing plumbing.

FORTUNE FOR MOTHER OF ALMA RUBEN

Hollywood, Cal., May 14.—If Mrs. Florence Hayes Ruben, mother of the screen star, Alma Ruben, establish her identity as the mother of one Michael Hayes, who died in Australia in 1909, leaving an estate of more than $1,000,000, she will receive one-fifth of the fortune. Michael Hayes ran away from his home in Ireland half a century ago, according to Mrs. Ruben, and is believed to have been killed in the war. She learned of his death.

LEXINGTON PAGEANT REHEARSALS BEGUN

Chorus rehearsals in preparation for the Lexington Pageant of the week of June 15-20 have been begun. The latest addition to the group of singers who will participate, is the Highland Diet Club of Newton, whose services were obtained by the pageant committee through the efforts of George Wain of that organization. Other units of the chorus are the King's Chapel choir of Boston and the Lexington Male chorus. Nightly rehearsals are conducted in the town hall.

Petroleum Will Kill Dandruff

Noonan's Hair Petrole

If it were not for its disagreeable odor, petroleum would be the first thought to stop dandruff and itching scalp because of its known value as proven by the wonderful heads of hair among the workers in the petroleum districts. This odor has been removed in Noonan's Hair Petrole and the result is a hair tonic — the use of which frees the scalp from dandruff and itching and strengthens the hair, giving it new life, vigor and lustre. Noonan's Hair Petrole is used by men, women and children. It is sold by druggists everywhere, 50 cents and at a bottle, or applied by barbers — Advt.

Friend of Kiddies

William Miskell, manager of Gordon's Alton Theatre, joins with the Boston Evening American in inviting 100 inmates of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children to see "Sally" tomorrow.

THEATRE TREAT FOR POOR CHILDREN

Destitute Kiddies Invited by Boston Evening American and Alton Playhouse

One hundred inmates of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children will be guests of the Boston Evening American and the management of Gordon's Alton Theatre, Brighton Avenue, Alton, at the matinee performance tomorrow. The children will ride from the institution on Harrison Avenue to the theatre and return in busses offered by the Cambridge Parking Company. The motion picture "Sally," featuring dainty Colleen Moore and funny Leon Errol, is the big treat offered by Manager William Miskell for the delight of the kiddies. Several comedy pictures of the type best liked by all children will be shown in addition to several "surprise" offerings, the nature of which has not been divulged by the theatre folks. A plentiful supply of sweet lollypops donated by the Page and Shaw Candy Company will be distributed.

KOUSSEVITZKY LEAVES FOR EUROPE

Goes Abroad to Get New Players for the Boston Symphony

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who recently threw a bomb into local musical circles by announcing the greatest shakeup in the present of the orchestra since its organization, has sailed for Europe from New York aboard the R. S. Republic. He was accompanied by Mrs. Koussevitzky. Conductor Koussevitzky, at the time of his announcement, in which he criticized some of the musicians for smoking pipes, cigars and cigarettes during their concert rehearsals, and some of them for being artists of mediocre ability, declared his intention of replacing them with musicians he expected to seek out among the talent of Europe. The announcement of the fates of his European recruits may be expected shortly.

'BRICKBOTTOM' INDICTMENTS ATTACKED

Defendants May Know Today if They Must Face Trial Immediately

Motions to quash indictments against them were filed with Judge Brown in Middlesex Superior Court today by several of the "Brickbottom" defendants taken in the Saturday night liquor raids in Somerville. The same defendants also filed requests for bills of particulars. The defendants, making such motions, were represented by Attorneys John J. Higgins, William P. McCarthy and James P. Brennan. Judge Brown took their applications under advisement. Judge Bacon, who had received trial.

8 WOMEN ON JURY TRYING GIRL SLAYER

PATERSON, N. J., May 14.—Mildred "Babe" Sage's trial for the murder of her aunt, Samuel Cantelino, is a woman's trial, indeed.

Seven women are on the jury and a woman, Mrs. Margaret Kuyke, mature Paterston housewife, is foreman. None of the feminine jurors is under thirty and most of them are middle-aged matrons. One of the defense attorneys is Miss Mary McKinstry of Paterston, who probably will make the first summation for the girl.

The trial is notable for another peculiarity—the speed. The entire jury was picked in twenty-seven minutes and at the end of court on the first day, the State had closed and the witnesses for the defense had testified.

As her young brother, George, only eye-witness to the killing, told his version of the story, "Babe" slumped in her chair and fainted. Throughout the session, while witnesses were being her life as a prosecutor of a tea room at Little Falls and "Babe" of Cantelino, a powerful man physically, the "Babe" appeared a nervous, unsteady, so right and she was. Her collapse was expected.

John A. Matthews of the defense counsel printed a picture of "Babe" making a slave of the girl. "Her who was bullied and beaten by her boy-friend could be proved by a thousand incidents," he told the jury.

Gen. Bullard's Inside Story of Great World War

Mistakes of Officers and Units Disclosed in Intimate Narrative of the A. E. F. in Battle

The men of the Yankee Division—New England's own—are looking forward eagerly to reading Major-General Robert Lee Bullard's gripping personal story of the World War, Capt. William J. Blake, regional manager of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau said today.

Captain Blake, former Harvard athlete, who was wounded overseas expressed gratitude for THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN's enterprise in obtaining the publication of so important a work. The captain said:

"General Robert Lee Bullard had a splendid reputation in France among the officers and enlisted men of my division, the 26th (Yankee) Division, because we had a chance to see and appreciate how the men of the First Division, whom we relieved in the Toul sector at the very beginning of our active participation in the line, looked up to and admired him as their division commander."

"We therefore followed his career as a corps commander and afterward as a division commander with interest but with confidence that he knew his job."

"One who has served with his energy as a division commander having the confidence of his men and after as one of the two Lieut. Generals with the A. E. F. must certainly have a great amount of information for all of us who served under him in France and for the general public."

"We shall look forward to reading his articles and the officers and enlisted men who served in France and all persons will be grateful to THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN for making possible the publication of so important and interesting a work."

Bullard Discloses Mistakes of Officers and Troops of A. E. F.

Which made the better soldier in the World War, the man from the city or the man from the country? This is one of the questions discussed entertainingly by Major-General Robert Lee Bullard, U. S. A., in his first published narrative of Captain William J. Blake, regional manager of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau and former Yankee Division officer, who praises the ability and resource of General Bullard.

An American army commander in France. He was in the midst of things. They called him "Fighting's right hand."

He led the American Division which was FIRST to enter the front line of battle in France.

FIRST to take a German prisoner. FIRST to place the enemy position in the Battle of Cantigny, which was the FIRST American offensive of the World War.

A thousand books have been written about the great war, but never one like this, which begins on Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and will be continued thereafter, commencing next Monday, in THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

Major-General Bullard's style is the intimate, chatty style of one who is writing home to the members of his family, in this case the Great American People.

Former VD Officer Predicts Great Interest Among Veterans in General Bullard's History man of the world whose important place in the cast of characters entitles him to a place behind the scenes.

Bullard knows—and tells: How some city-bred American residents and their officers, well drilled in military tactics, often got "lost" when they found themselves fighting in open country, amidst woods, fields and rivers.

How they were never where they thought they were, never even where their officers reported that they were.

How these city-bred soldiers nevertheless won everlasting fame for their tenacity, steadfastness and endurance in fighting.

How a slight variance between two "Orders of Battle" the one written by a French commander for the French Army and the other written by General Bullard for the American Army, each intending to co-operate with the other led to an unprecedented situation in one of the greatest battles of the war—and How American prestige was enhanced by this accident and the value of the American troops in France.

It begins on Sunday, May 17, in the Sunday Advertiser.

Second installment on Monday next, in THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN.

VINCENT CASE FULLER'S LIFE SPOZZLE TO COURTS WORTH MILLION TO BUSINESS

Can a first offence in a case of law be a second offence?

On can a second offence be really construed as a first offence?

These aren't questions in a public hospital examining, although they sound as if they might be.

They are problems the Mayor is to confront Registrar's Motor Vehicle Frank A. Goom and the West Roxbury courts, a result of the developments in the prosecution of Charles D. Bent of Jamaica Plain, charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license.

On May 15 Vincent will appear in Central Court to answer a charge of driving a car while intoxicated on Atlantic avenue on May 10.

On May 25, the same defendant will appear in West Roxbury court for disposition of a six charges for a similar offence, able to have been committed on Feb. 25.

The new drunken driver bill makes mandatory a judgment on conviction on the act of driving while intoxicated.

Yes, the Registrar's Central Court, who will dispose of charges of motor vehicles gone wrong, in a first offence.

If Vincent is found guilty, the court may dispose of as a first case, having no previous record of the car, those put in West Roxbury, growing of a similar charge brought in May.

Robert B. Parker of Philadelphia, formerly of Boston, regards his business association and friendship with Governor Alvan T. Fuller so highly that he has just taken out half a million dollars insurance on the Governor's life.

Parker is the business assistant of the Governor and is the manager of Packard Inc., the sales organization which distributes Packard cars in Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia concern is a subsidiary of Governor Fuller's automobile business in Boston.

Parker, who was a West Point cadet when he gave up a military career to go into the automobile business as the protégé of the Governor, feels that if anything should happen to his sponsor, the loss in a personal and business way would be almost irreparable.

For this reason he suggested to the Governor that he be permitted to take out the insurance policy for his own protection. The Governor was agreeable and passed the physical tests with flying colors.

AMERICAN INJURED IN GERMAN COLLISION

Rome, May 14 (U.S.S.)—Two Germans were killed, three were injured and Maurice Lowenthal, an American, was hurt when an automobile carrying American tourists and German pilgrims collided near Anagni, Italy, today, Philadelphia said Lowenthal would recover.

$1,500,000 HOTEL ON HOLLIS SITE

Boston will have another large hotel. It will be built on the site of the present Hotel Hollis on Tremont street, at Seaver place, directly opposite the Wilbur Theatre.

Charles H. Blackall, Boston architect and owner of the property, will promote the enterprise. The new structure, a 300-room hotel, will cost more than $1,500,000. The Hollis, which is in the path of the proposed Tremont street widening, will be razed.

'CINDERELLA' GIVES LIE TO FATHER IN DEFENCE OF 'KIDNAPPER'

relief at the girl's refusal of her parent's testimony.

Lucille's father took the stand a few different men in appearance from the gaunt hillman who tramped the mountains for many days and nights in search of his daughter and "the hawk."

Chatterton was dressed in a brand new suit of brown and he wore a comparatively immaculate white shirt, which, however, was innocent of collar. His hair was slicked down and parted in approved "sheik" fashion and it was apparent that the hillman had given great thought to his personal adornment for his big day of days.

The rifle under discussion was identified by Chatterton, who said:

IDENTITIES GIVEN.

"It belongs to me. I paid for it. I swapped position with Roy Freeman for it."

In answer to a question as to whether Woodward was a gump in the Chatterton home, the hillman said:

"No, he just made his home there. He just stayed there."

Chatterton testified that he saw Earl take the rifle down off a wall bracket on the day Earl and Lucille disappeared. Chatterton objected, he said, because Earl had no gun license.

The witness admitted, however, that he had frequently allowed Woodward to use the rifle.

Under cross-examination by Charles E. Burton, senior counsel for the accused, Chatterton said he had known Woodward since Earl was a baby and that Earl came to live at the Chatterton home last November.

MADE CHAIRS FOR HOME.

Asked by Attorney Burton about the furnishings of the Chatterton home and especially regarding the number of chairs in the kitchen, Chatterton replied:

"There ain't but few, because he broke them."

Witness admitted, under persistent questioning, that Woodward had made other chairs for the hotel and in addition had given Mrs. Chatterton money with which to buy pots and pans and other things for the home.

Further, Chatterton admitted that he never objected to Woodward's using the rifle, provided he cleaned it.

During his testimony, Chatterton's active eyes never once rested on Woodward, who sat erect in his chair glaring fixedly at the witness in an intense stare that never wavered.

Little Lucille was next placed on the stand, called by the prosecution, only to prove a decided homemaker and a perfect witness for the defense.

"Whose rifle is this?" asked County Prosecutor Wayne C. O'Connell.

"That's Daddy's," the girl answered.

ed. "We had it all the time we were away. Earl shot it once at a party, but he didn't catch it at all."

Lucille's answer brought laughter from the court spectators.

Her direct testimony was brief, as well as her cross-examination by Attorney Sullivan, assistant defense counsel, but she contradicted the prosecution when she said in answer to a question:

"Daddy told Earl he could use the gun any time he wanted to."

She stated her father's statement that he had objected to Woodward's taking the rifle on the day he ran away with Lucille.

His spirits were further raised when he was greeted outside the court-house by a number of townsmen.

They rushed forward as Woodward approached, and shaking him by the hand, congratulated him on the victory which they felt sure he had already won.

A number of residents of this town are outposts in their denunciation of the tactics which resulted in the postponement of Woodward's trial for kidnapping, to prosecute him for the arrest of an old rifle and a blanket.

The rifle is of the vintage of 1894, Winchester 24-08, valued by Walter Chatterton, its owner, at only $10.

The blanket, which Woodward used to keep Lucille warm in the woods, he declares was in the Chatterton home when he went there and he believed it was the property of his host.

When informed that her father and mother were coming over from Granville to attend the trial and have dinner with her in the home of Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Noble Stannard, the little girl burst into tears.

Turning to Attorney General Frank C. Archibald, she pleaded:

"You aren't going to let them take me away, are you? You aren't going to let them take me back to Granville?"

The Attorney General, who has become a sort of godfather to the child, assured her that she would attend the trial with her mother. She was considerably upset by the incident, however, and for some time thereafter complained of a head-ache.

DURING MAY—A YEAR TO PAY

PROSECUTOR A WITNESS.

Then Lucille was sworn, and in an apparent attempt to counteract the girl's testimony, County Prosecutor Wayne himself took the stand and testified that he talked with Woodward at the jail about the rifle and that Woodward admitted taking it.

The weight of the prosecutor's declaration was lost, however, when the cross-examiner drew from him admissions that he had not warned Woodward of his rights to silence and had not warned Woodward of the prosecution intent to use whatever he said against him.

With Wayne's appearance, the prosecution rests its case and Woodward sat straighter in his chair, ready and eager to take the stand in his own defense against all this confusing "lawyer talk."

Little Lucille met her mother today for the first time since the girl and Woodward fled on April 24. But had the meeting been between two mere bare acquaintances, it could not have been more casual—except for one thing, Lucille's two-year-old baby sister, Lucy.

Mr. and Mrs. Chatterton drove over the mountain to court and Lucille saw her mother descend from the rig and walk toward her. With a sudden shyness that wiped the smile from her face, Lucille advanced to meet her.

"I thought Earl had shot you through the heart," said the mother calmly, and that was all. Neither Lucille nor her mother made any motion of affection.

HUGS AND KISSES BABY.

But when the instant of greeting had elapsed, Lucille changed utterly in manner and with a cry of delight, seized from her mother's arms, little two-year-old Lucy.

Oblivious of the bystanders, the Cinderella girl hugged and kissed her baby sister, talked baby talk to it and then marched triumphantly for the courtroom, refusing to give the two-year-old up.

Clad in new clothing, his head erect and eyes shining, Woodward strode to the courthouse with Deputy Sheriff Stannard, following an affecting meeting at the jail with Lucille, the first since his arrest.

The little girl was also arrayed in a new costume, and was so radiantly happy and so manifestly glad to see him, that the erstwhile "Hawk of Lost Nation Mountain" was almost overcome.

He declared he was willing to face whatever was in store for him, and his spirits were further raised when he was greeted outside the court-house by a number of townsmen.

"FREDDIE THE SHEIK" Gets into trouble with free tickets to the show. See Boston Sunday Advertiser.

They rushed forward as Woodward approached, and shaking him by the hand, congratulated him on the victory which they felt sure he had already won.

A number of residents of this town are outposts in their denunciation of the tactics which resulted in the postponement of Woodward's trial for kidnapping, to prosecute him for the arrest of an old rifle and a blanket.

The rifle is of the vintage of 1894, Winchester 24-08, valued by Walter Chatterton, its owner, at only $10.

The blanket, which Woodward used to keep Lucille warm in the woods, he declares was in the Chatterton home when he went there and he believed it was the property of his host.

When informed that her father and mother were coming over from Granville to attend the trial and have dinner with her in the home of Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Noble Stannard, the little girl burst into tears.

Turning to Attorney General Frank C. Archibald, she pleaded:

The Attorney General, who has become a sort of godfather to the child, assured her that she would attend the trial with her mother. She was considerably upset by the incident, however, and for some time thereafter complained of a head-ache.

MEET IN JAIL OFFICE.

Her meeting with Woodward occurred in the jail office after she had been treated to a new outfit by Mrs. Sanford. Woodward, wearing black trousers, a striped coat and blue shirt, freshly shaved and with his hair neatly combed, was brought up from the jail to go to court.

Lucille stepped forward, and placing one of her small hands in the large paw of Woodward, she said:

"Hello, Earl."

Woodward stood without words for a few minutes, holding the child's hands and gazing at her repeatedly.

At length he drew a long breath and turning to the newspaperman said:

"Gee, don't she look great. She's some different from the last time I saw her. I'm mighty glad."

The little girl was somewhat embarrassed by the presence of the spectators, but showed no hesitation in expressing her pleasure in meeting Woodward.

ARCHIBALD PRESENT.

Attorney General Archibald was not present at the opening of court, having returned to his home last night. It was said he had no sympathy with the prosecution of the lady charged by County Attorney Wayne S. Bower.

The residents of Middlebury believe that the kidnapping charge will be dropped eventually, and they expressed indignation at the prosecution of Woodward for larceny. They point out that, according to his story, which the child has confirmed, both rifle and blanket were taken in proper form, and that Woodward should have been given an opportunity to return them as he said he intended.

OFFICIAL FAILS TO SHOW PHONE CO. OWNS PLANT

The startling contention that the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company does not actually own millions of dollars' worth of electrical equipment "purchased" from the Western Electric Company through the local company's 4½ per cent. license contract with the American Telephone Company of New York was made by Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan today at a continued hearing before the Public Utilities Commissioners.

Sullivan, fighting the New England Company's plea for an increase in rates totalling $12,000,000, submitted E. V. Cox, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone Company, to a severe cross-examination on the contract stipulations.

The contention of the corporation counsel was interpreted as meaning that in case of bankruptcy, the stock and bond holders of the New England Company would suffer to the amount of the reduced assets represented by Western Electric equipment in use and on hand.

Sullivan challenged Cox, who supervises the price of Western Electric equipment to the associated companies of the Bell system, to point out in the contract one place where the words "sell" or "rent" appear.

The contract speaks only of "furnishing," Sullivan stressed.

Cox declared, in answer to a question of Sullivan, that he helped to draw up the contract and see to it that the words "sell" or "rent" were not used.

He said that he had never looked through the contract to see if the words "sell," "rent" or "purchase" appeared in the text, but he assumed the words were there.

"Then look now and see if you can find it," said Sullivan.

The witness looked, but was unable to point out the places.

More than $10,000,000 worth of supplies were purchased by the New England company in 1924 from the Western Electric, previous witnesses testified.

Under the continuance of the license contract, economies were put in force, the witness said, such as furnishing storage space for equipment.

DAILY SHORT STORY

CHEATED

By Jack Woodford

THE courtroom was hushed as the verdict "guilty," came in.
Gibby, John, Harry, Hardington, the millionaire, it seemed, looked Ma, seemingly it had been out of style to convict millionaires of penal offenses any more—and it was the last appeal, too—it was up to the judge now and he was a stern judge, one whom it would be hard to sway
even in this day of swaying judges.
He leaned over his bench and pronounced judgment.
"Five years of penal servitude," he said sternly. "I'm sorry Mr.
Hardington, in my way, but even though the sentence is more drastic when afflicted upon you than it would be upon some younger man used to living a bit or less sort of life, I feel that in all justice—"
Hardington smiled sarcastically.
Never Serve.
"I'll never serve a day in prison to my certain knowledge," he stated calmly, and then, parenthetically, he asked: "May I have ten days in which to write up my affairs?"
Any thought he was at the mil-lionaire's attitude throughout the two trials, the judge smiled gravely, but don't think that any technicality is going to prevent your serving time. The sentence is light enough.
The years perhaps would have been more consistent, but I considered your circumstances in life, five years, perhaps, will be the equivalent, in your case, of ten years to some other less fortune-favored and fortunate-sorted man."
"I'll never even be the penitentiary," laughed Hardington.
From the courtroom he went to his home, and once there, put in a call at once for Richardson, Richardson who had been thrown out of the practice of his profession in New York because of his shady operations and questionable methods as a man of medicine. Richardson came at once upon the millionaire's insane leave.
For long hours they were closeted together, and every day following of the "ten day" respite, the millionaire called at the millionaire's home and spent most of the day.
At last the period allotted by the judge was up.
A deputy called in a county car to take the wealthy man to the penitentiary, and with him was the prosecuting attorney who intended to see that full justice was done.

Bentley Spoke
Hardington and Richardson waited them in the ornate parlor of the former's home. Bentley, the young prosecutor had been convicted himself, spoke first.
"Well, Hardington, we've come to take you to the pen," Hardington smiled almost cheerfully.
"I suppose that there is no valid legal reason why Doctor Richardson cannot come to see me twice a week on each visit of a day is there?"
"No," admitted Hardington, "not that I know of."
"I would like your word that he will not be prevented from seeing me twice a week, your word that you will intervene if necessary to see that this privilege is not denied me."
"You have my word," smiled
Bentley.
"Five years really means about three with good behavior off and all that sort of thing," persisted Har-dington.
"About that," Bentley smiled.

Hardington nodded to Richardson who rose and addressed the prosecuting attorney.
"You think you're a pretty smart young man, don't you, successfully to have gotten Hardington sentenced, and to have slipped me a pretty little fine a little while back—well, you've succeeded—in a way, but I think we're almost going to put it over after all. Would you mind asking Hardington some simple question?" Bentley smiled indulgently.
Stood Impassive
"What time is it, Hardington?" he harshly. Hardington took out his watch, but before he could reply, Richardson stepped forward and spoke to him sharply. Hardington put his watch back in his pocket, and stood impassive.
"Take your man," Richardson declared the deputy who stepped forward and taking the wealthy man's arm led him out.
"What a joke," laughed Bentley.
"The joke," replied Richardson saying the young man "is going to be on you, I think. You've been deputy, that had taken Hardington's away. He put him in the same position as he had been on that eventful day and then he walked suddenly up to Hardington and said something. Hardington stared, seemed somehow to change. He looked at Bentley and took out his watch.
"It's just twenty-three minutes after four," he said calmly and added, "well, I'm ready to go."
Richardson smiled.
"You're back, Hardington, you've served your sentence—it worked out just as I thought it would—you don't remember a thing, do you?"
Under Hypnosis
"Do you mean to say that you actually kept me under hypnosis all that time and my sentence is really over," gasped Hardington.
"Ask your friend Bentley here," smiled Richardson.
But Bentley was busy thinking up a motion for the State legislature concerning the calling of abnormal psychologists at State prisons and remembering several other damned specimens said to be up taking their confinement very lightly.

PALESTINE FUND DRIVE OPENS MAY 20

A mass meeting in Tremont Temple, Lorimer Hall, on May 20, officially will open the Palestine Foundation Fund in Boston. The campaign is to establish a definite sum for national work and an attempt to place a Palestine Foundation Fund box in every home.

Dr. Rieger

Until that date preliminary meetings of executives and workers in the drive will be held and plans made for a comprehensive canvass of the city's Jewish districts.

Samuel Waldstein, chairman of the Greater Boston Keren Hayesod Committee, which is another name for the Palestine Foundation, has accepted the chairmanship of the coming drive, in which it is hoped to give much to the rebuilding of the Holy Land and as a home for the Jews. Max Nigrosch is chairman of the Boston council of the Jewish National Fund.

Among the prominent speakers scheduled to open the campaign is Dr. Eliezer Rieger, a recent arrival from Palestine, a brilliant student and an eloquent orator. Isaac Harris who has spent a year in the ancient land and who returned to Boston only last week will relate his experiences in the Holy Land.

The Council of Jewish Juniors in presenting "The Quaker Girl" at the Boston Opera House, was assured of its success from the very beginning as a result of the enthusiasm so ardently manifested. Special praise goes to Sylvia Levy as the star of the production. William Silverman, Anne Novick, Phoebe Woolfe, Hilda Sonnabend, Walter Hamburger, Bert Siskind and Erwin Gutterman portrayed their respective roles excellently.

Chelsea Jews responded graciously to the appeal made by Joseph Barondess, former commissioner of education of New York City, who spoke in that city under auspices of the New England Joint Campaign Committee, which seeks relief for the stranded Jews in ports of Europe, Cuba and for the salvation of uprooted Jewish populations in Eastern and Central Europe.

Speaking in the Chelsea Hebrew School Building, Washington avenue, Mr. Barondess told of his intimate knowledge of conditions among the refugees and the agricultural settlers in Russia, which the campaign seeks to relieve.

Other speakers were Mayor Lawrence P. Quigley, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Temple Ohabei Sholem, Maurice Caro, S. S. Eisenberg and George E. Gordon of Amos Lodge B'nai B'rith, Harry F. Smith, chairman of the Chelsea committee, presided, and under his supervision the Chelsea Jewish community virtually pledged to oversubscribe its quota of $10,000.

Although the definite program has not been arranged, the date of the New England Zionist Regional convention is June 14 and it will take place in Springfield. More than 400 delegates from all parts of the State and New England are expected to attend and settle pending matters of vital importance to the future of the Zionist organization.

Louis C. Henin, president of the Springfield chapter, has announced that elaborate plans are being formulated to make the convention a memorable one inasmuch as this is the first time Springfield has thus been honored.

At a meeting of the Boston branch, Young People's League of the United Synagogue of America, the following officers were elected: Dr. A. Shubow, president; Dr. William Smith, first vice-president; M. A. Margolis, second vice-president; Rose Cohen, corresponding secretary; Mark Salzman, treasurer.

The organizations affiliated with the league include the Junior Council of Beth Hamidrash Hagadol, Crawford street synagogue; Junior Council of Temple Beth El, Fowler street, and Junior Congregation Adath Jeshurun, Blue Hill avenue synagogue.

BISHOP ANDERSON WILL HEAD NEW PILGRIMAGE

Rt. Rev. Joseph G. Anderson, Auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of Boston, has been selected to lead the second pilgrimage to Rome. Bishop Anderson, rector of St. Peter's Church, Meetinghouse Hill, Dorchester, has been stationed there since the death of Mr. Ryan. He was formerly rector of St. Paul's Church, Dorchester. He was made a Bishop in 1910.

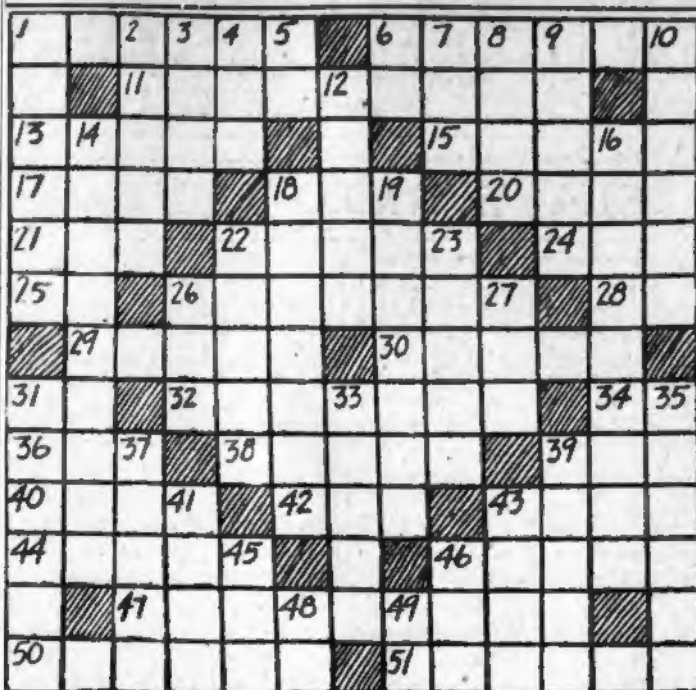

He will lead the second band of Boston pilgrims in the S. S. Orca from Commonwealth Pier on July 15.

Two pilgrimages, leaving New York July 16 and 17, will also carry Boston pilgrims with the Sodality and Jesuits.

BRITISH CHIEFS ALARMED BY COMMUNISTS

London, May 14 (A.P.).—Alarm over the growth of communism in Great Britain, voiced widely through the press recently, seems to have invaded the British cabinet. It is understood that it is considering the advisability of refusing all foreign communists permission to enter this country for the annual conference of British communists which opens at Glasgow, Scotland, May 31.

The cabinet's reported attitude is regarded as an admission of anxiety over the rapid growth of the communist element since the barriers to its members entering this country were removed by the late Labor government.

It is avowed that the question of barring foreign radicals from the affairs of English communists was brought before the cabinet some weeks ago as the result of a Home Office investigation which led to the discovery of a plot against the life of Foreign Secretary Chamberlain.

At the time newspapers gained from Scotland Yard an admission that its detectives had been busy investigating the activities of radicals in England, and that these activities had been more widespread than supposed.

The investigations are understood to have revealed that several hundred foreign Communists entered England last year and have worked since that time distributing propaganda and conducting meetings, especially in the mining districts of Wales and the industrial regions of North England and Scotland.

SONG BIRDS ARE TORTURED FOR DECOYS

New York, May 14.—Thousands of song birds are being tortured by red hot irons each year to satisfy the appetites of wealthy Gourmands in southern France, Italy and Belgium, according to Dr. T. Gilbert Pearson, head of the national association of Audubon Societies, on his arrival here on the White Star liner Homeric.

Dr. Pearson, who is also president of the international committee for bird protection, recently attended an international convention for the protection of birds in Luxembourg.

"The wealthy Gourmands in France, Belgium and Italy," Dr. Pearson said, "capture various types of song birds alive and utilize red hot irons to blind them. The suffering birds are then put in cages, the theory being that their tortured cries are poignant melodies that attract scores of other birds, which are captured and served in pies or boiled to satisfy the appetites of these cruel people."

MORE THEATRE TICKETS FOR JINGLERS

Here you are, Jingle Fans!

More free tickets are offered for clever "last lines" to today's Limerick. Just step on the gas and win a pair.

These tickets are for next Monday evening's opening performance of "Oh, Marra" at the Plymouth Theatre, in which Alice Brady is starred.

You remember Alice of the movies. Well, here is a chance for you to see her in person in a really clever comedy from the French. It was written by Louis Verneuil and adapted by Wilton Lackaye. This play is being produced by William A. Brady, father of the star. Miss Brady will also sing in this production.

The principals supporting her include Kenneth MacKenna, Edwin Nicander, Mildred Florence, John Cromwell, Lee Kohlmar and Shirley Gale.

Five pairs of seats will be awarded for this snappy comedy. Get busy, folks, and win them.

Can you imagine a person winning first prize in the jingle contest with the very first "last line" she submitted? Well, that was the experience of Gertrude R. Frederick of Barnard road, Belmont.

In telling of her experience she wrote: "Can you imagine how surprised and delighted I was to receive your check for $25 for my 'last line' to Limerick No. 67? It was complete surprise, as I didn't see it printed in the paper. It must have been printed while I was away for a couple of days, so you see I knew nothing about being the lucky one until your check came rolling in and then I whooped for joy. It was the first limerick I ever tried to complete, so I feel very proud. I've always paid more attention to crossword puzzles, but this night one of the family read aloud this incomplete limerick and I supplied a 'last line' and the family induced me to send it in, which I did, with very wonderful results."

"The jingle that won me first prize was about ensemble suits, so I am going to use that money to buy an ensemble suit, for I have been wanting one a long time. Very fitting, don't you think? Thank you very much for choosing my 'last line' as the winner. I never dreamed it would get a prize. I am very enthusiastic about them now and look forward to trying to complete them every night."

Dorothy Herman of Downer court, Dorchester, a ten-year-old miss, who submitted a clever "last line" for one of the "Mothers' Day" jingles, wrote as follows:

"I think there is nobody like our mothers, for they do all they can for us. I go to the Mother's School and I am ten years old. I am in the sixth grade of school and I help mother when she don't feel well. I have saved all my pennies to take her some place this Summer with the good Lord's help. We all like the Boston Evening American."

Wilfrid F. Bourque of Whitman street, New Bedford, wrote as follows: "I want to tell you that I certainly enjoy the fun of composing 'last lines' and hope to land one of the prizes yet. Wishing you and the Boston Evening American continuous success, I am 'limerickally' yours."

Mrs. M. A. Headley of Western avenue, Lynn, got a thrill when she saw her name in print. She tells of it as follows: "Such a surprise to see my name in 'print,' not as a winner, but just my little note in print. It causes a funny little feeling around one's heart to see their name in print. Baby and his brother of five are sleeping and daddy doesn't get home till 12 o'clock from work, so I have got my American and the 'last lines' for company."

After returning from a Winter in Florida, Flora B. Smith of Nantasket Beach is now turning her attention to Boston Evening American Jingles. She wrote as follows: "Have just returned from Florida and did not get the paper there. My first line was very near the one given first prize, so I guess I'll keep trying."

2 RHODE ISLAND MILLS CUT WORKING HOURS

Warren, R. I., May 14.—Curtailed production for an indefinite period was announced at the plants of the Warren Manufacturing Company and the Parker Mills, the two largest cotton mills here, to take effect next week.

The former plant, now operating on a forty-eight-hour schedule, is cut to a five-day (43½-hour) basis. The Parker Mills, a branch of the Fall River (Mass.) organization, will operate weaving and spinning departments four days per week and part of the carding department two days a week. Scarcity of orders is given as the reason for the curtailment.

BAY STATE POSTOFFICE CLERKS TO MEET JUNE 14

The annual convention of the Massachusetts State Branch of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks will take place Sunday, June 14, at the Hotel Brunswick.

More than 150 delegates are expected to attend and President Charles J. Kirby of the Boston branch is making plans for the entertainment of the guests and delegates. Thomas J. Conaty of Taunton, president of the Massachusetts State Branch, will preside over the convention and dinner.

A Clear Headed Man Shows the World Court Is a Fraud

Americans everywhere owe a debt of gratitude to Senator William E. Borah.

He is a student in the midst of slogan-shouters, a man in the midst of political echoes, a statesman in the midst of politicians.

He knows that one sober reflection is worth more than the hair-trigger resolutions of misguided multitudes; one naked fact more majestic than all propaganda-poisoned frenzies.

Senator Borah came to Boston and spoke at Unity House, but it was the gospel of Fanelli Hall.

He stands for a genuine international court, established to try cases according to international law and against any fraudulent court, created to fashion international situations to fit the intrigues of foreign diplomats.

He revealed this aristocratically-labelled device to be, not a court, but an entirely novel and sinister combination of empire, attorney and world plotter, with power to act on "any question or dispute," legal, political or mixed, referred to it by the League of Nations.

It does not confine its activities to interpreting the law; it tells the League of Nations what to do under certain circumstances!

It is not a John Marshall institution; it is a Bismarck institution, a Foch institution.

It wears the plumage of the dove, but it sets upon the eggs of turmoil.

Under proposed amendments, ratified by more than forty nations, this so-called World Court must advise arbitration committees when summoned to do so by the League Council, and if not in session when summoned this so-called court "shall meet with the utmost possible dispatch!"

Here all its majesty departs; it puts on its hat and runs to its little courthouse whenever its master, the League of Nations, pushes the button.

It is not a court—only a glorified decoy!

Under a proposed amendment, this so-called court could say whether a question was domestic or not, whether the Japanese had the right to enter the United States.

One lone American member of this so-called court would be helpless to defeat a hostile decision, but his presence would make us subject to that decision.

Senator Borah pointed out another anomalous situation. The so-called court and the League Council both may decide whether a question is domestic, but if they disagree the decision of the council prevails over the decision of the so-called court!

Thus the last petal falls from this beautiful rose of so-called international justice.

The League Council of ten can declare war and this so-called World Court can advise it to declare war, and with one little helpless American judge, sitting in that incubator of war, overwhelmed by interests hostile to American destiny, we would be morally bound to take part in the war that was declared!

Puritans and Cavaliers and the endless line of immigrants after them did not come here to make cannon fodder for wars declared by European plotters; they came here to make a free nation that would mind its own business!

Children Must Read Bible

Child Labor Must Stay. Rather Contradictory

Last week the Legislature of Florida had a busy day. The Senate passed a bill compelling daily public reading of the Bible in all public schools. Poor old Darwin was dug up once more, and it was shown quite satisfactorily that his teachings are responsible for the deplorable lack of Bible knowledge that prevails.

Statistics as to the actual number of Florida public school children, and their fathers and mothers, that have read Darwin carefully would be enlightening.

While the Florida Senate was busy with the Bible, the House of Representatives enthusiastically rejected the Constitutional Amendment that would protect children from child labor. It might be a good idea now for the Florida Senate to pass another bill for compulsory daily reading of the Bible to Florida Representatives.

Careful reading of St. Matthew and other Bible readings would teach these Representatives that Christ, if He were here, would not approve of grinding the lives of children into dividends in factories and mills, and He would undoubtedly have voted in favor of that Constitutional Amendment had He been a member of the Florida House of Representatives. To that you may add that, except by a miracle, He couldn't have been a member. The "interests" would see to that.

Why This Delay?

Governor Fuller Should Realize That the Fifth Congressional District Has a Right to Be Represented at Washington

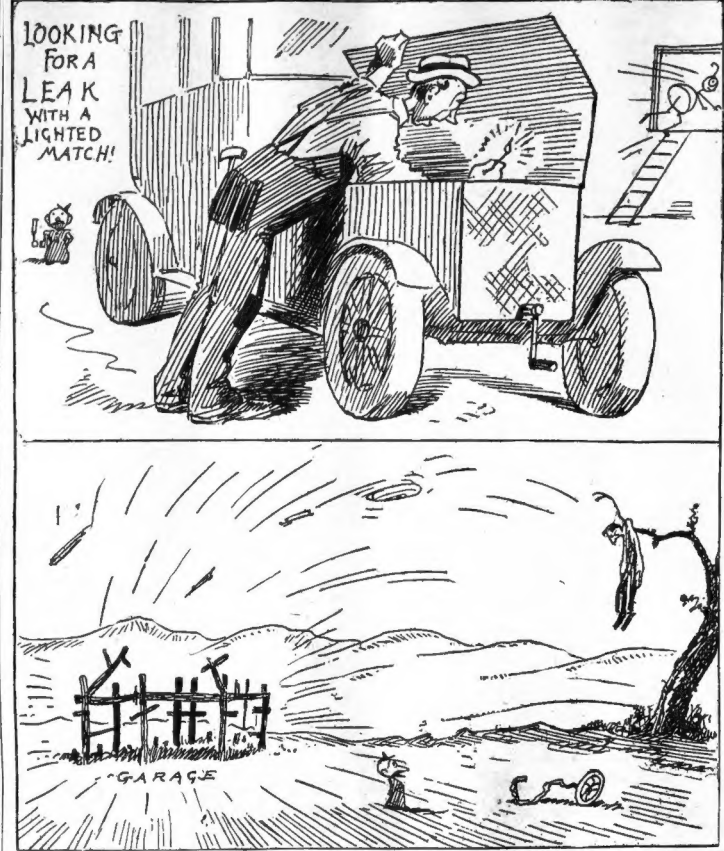

His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts assumes a grave responsibility in delaying the call for a special election in the Fifth Congressional District of Massachusetts to fill the vacancy. This has existed since the death of Congressman John Jacob Rogers last March.

No reason has been given for the delay in the issuance of the call. No good reason, as we believe, can be given for further delay.

The people of the Fifth Congressional District of Massachusetts have a right to be represented at Washington to determine whether Congress is in session, and regardless of the party in power finds it convenient to submit its feet to the feet of a popular referendum.

How Not to Grow Old

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

THIS is the time of year when a man begins to shed "that married feeling," along with his smoking jacket, his pipe and his felt tips, and to assume the glad guise of freedom, along with his straw hat, his cigarettes and his white flannel trousers.

You can no longer spot a married man by the sag of his shoulders, the spots on his nose, the wrinkles in his coat and the wistful look in his eyes. It is as impossible to distinguish a married man from a single bachelor as it is to tell a happy mother from a mother by the back of her head.

No matter how MUCH married a man may be, he doesn't FEEL that way half the time!

But a man has nothing to remind him that he is married—not even a wedding ring or a string around his finger. So, how can the poor fellow remember it in these days, when every woman he meets tries her best to make him forget it?

A woman's whole life changes on her wedding day; but a man continues to turn out at the same time in the morning, to turn up for dinner in the evening, and to turn in when he gets tired, pretty much as in his bachelor days.

There is nothing in a man's whole existence to give him "that married feeling," except his wife.

Then he begins to think of marriage as the ideal state, and of his wife as a Delirious Angel.

Then he doesn't need a string around his finger to remind him that he's married—he just stips his hand in his pocket and takes out his pipe. THEN he has "that married feeling!" Oh, beautiful AHH!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

The great business of man is to improve his mind and govern his passions; whether in our power to compass or not, are only amusements.

The mind ought sometimes to be diverted, that it may return the better to thinking.

Man is a thinking being, whether he will or no. All he can do to turn his thoughts the best way.

When given good observations are drawn from so many particulars as to become certain and infallible.

DR. ELIOT ON THE NEW RELIGION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHEN a man has arrived at the age of ninety years with faculties undimmed, his ideas about religion are apt to be interesting.

Usually they are not very theoretical, but have been modified by his experience.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, one of the foremost minds of the United States, recently gave some interesting opinions on this subject. He said that while boys and girls, according to his observation, are extremely reticent on religious subjects with their own kindred, when they go to college they talk a great deal with their intimates about them. He says that almost all educated youth acquire and cherish motives that may fairly be called religious.

The motive which is the most practical is the desire to be serviceable in the world, serviceable to comrades and friends, to families, to the town or city, and to the nation. Toward the creeds of the past he thinks that their use is frankly suspicious. He rejects almost all of them, and comes to the question of religion with a free mind.

The two sentiments that most inspire men to good deeds are love and hope, and religion gives more rational play to these two sentiments than anything else.

The new religion affords indefinite scope for progress and development. It rejects all limitations of family, tribal and national religion. Its fundamental precept of service abounds admits of infinite variety both in time and space. It is very simple, and therefore possesses an important element of durability.

Most religions condemn the majority of the human race to hell and reserve salvation to a comparatively small portion. This has been done to the effort of the Church to realize the saving business for itself. But Dr. Eliot believes the ancient systems of reward and punishment of the future world will have to be abandoned.

To his mind, the desire to be serviceable to one's fellows leads directly to a belief in the future will be devoid of worship. The new religion will magnify and laud God's love and compassion, but will not venture to state what the justice of God may or may not require of any of His creatures.

From an old man who has passed the ordinary term of life and who has spent his days in intellectual activity, the above views are interesting.

HOW NATURE PAINTS A RAINBOW

By Garrett P. Servis
Noted Meteorologist and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Kindly inform me, in the interest of a small boy, my son, what causes a rainbow"—E. H. S.

THE seasons of rainbows being at hand, together with the time when city people most frequently see the country, where both rainbows and stars are best seen, it is probable that a great many boys and older persons as well, will be interested in these astonishingly beautiful phenomena, the explanation of which astonished philosophers for hundreds of years before we got into satisfactory shape.

The details of this explanation are for considerable mathematics, but the outline is not difficult to understand.

A rainbow is formed by the drops of water in the edge of a shower that is illuminated by unbroken sunlight, which strikes it from one side.

It never sees a rainbow unless you have your back toward the sun. The rainbow is always in the opposite part of the sky from the sun.

The falling drops reflect sunlight to your eyes after having first refracted it in its course through them, and then dispersed its constituent colors, so that as the colors come back to you its red, yellow and blue, or violet rays appear separately.

A rainbow is a part of a circle, about 42 degrees in radius, and centers with the point in the sky opposite to the sun.

This is the angle at which the greatest amount of refracted light reflected from the raindrops reaches the eye. The reflection occurs at the back of the drop, which acts like a mirror for the light that has passed through from the front.

The rainbow is about two degrees wider on the outside, red on the outside, blue or violet on the inside edge. The central portion is yellowish.

The distribution of colors comes from the fact that the red waves are least refracted, while the yellow and other colors of the spectrum come between them.

Small rainbows seen in the mist of waterfalls may appear as complete circles, but the observer stands on the bank with the sun behind his head in line with the centre of the rainbow.
